COMMON BASS MISTAKES

And How To Fix Them

Technique issues - we've all got 'em. Here are some resources to help you dig deeper on the topics covered in this video.

Mistake #5 - Squish Hand

Your First Lesson: A good place to start to sort a variety of bad beginner habits.

Mistake #4 - Rocky Rhythm

How to Play With a Drummer: A basic start on locking in with confidence.

Beginner to Badass Course: Yes, I'm plugging my course. It'll help you massively with your rhythm, especially through the Ultimate Groove Workout exercise.

Improve Your Groove with this Rhythm Subdivision Exercise: A more advanced video from my personal YT channel.

Trick to Clean Up Your Rhythm (using delay): Also more advanced, but a really fun way to practice rhythm.

Mistake #3 - Uneven Plucking

Are You Plucking The Wrong Way?: Deep dive on raking vs alternating, plus I worked really hard on those Street Fighter graphics.

Plucking and The Producer Switch: Not strictly related to uneven plucking, but it's plucking hand stuff you should know.

Beginner to Badass Course: Muah hah I snuck another course link in here, repeated practice is the best way to even your plucking out.

BASS BUZZ

Mistake #2 - Flying Fingers

5 Levels of Finger Exercise: A BassBuzz oldie but a goodie, a deep dive into fretting hand technique.

Mistake #1 - Pinky Neglect

Are You Fretting The Wrong Way?: Everything you ever wanted to know about 1 finger per fret, Simandl technique, and boxing analogies.

Practice This Daily: A music-based exercise designed to help you use all your fingers and more.

Technique Fails (Practice This Daily): Another exercise even more tightly targeted to technique issues.

Here's the thing - awareness is the first step to fixing your technique, but it's not the end of the road.

You need to put in the time and repetition to build new technique habits, which is where my Beginner to Badass course is ready to step in and save the day.

In over 30+ hours of step-by-step lessons, you'll practice good technique in the context of real bass lines, over and over, with me there to guide you all along the way.

It would actually be pretty hard to finish this course and not be a bass badass. 😉
